Playskool Project

Frank Stella's Playskool Series, completed in 1983, is a group of nine editioned wall reliefs made from cast-bronze parts, etched magnesium and honeycomb aluminum, and numerous found objects. To create an edition, the artist first constructed an original assemblage using found objects and irregularly shaped etched magnesium and honeycomb aluminum sheets. The assemblage was duplicated for the edition by selecting some of the found objects to be reproduced in cast bronze, by collecting similar found objects, and by making additional shaped metal sections. When all of the parts were assembled, each relief was painted by the artist with acrylic and vinyl paints and screen inks. Some of the etched magnesium parts were hand-wiped with inks by Rodney Konopaki and Bob Cross.
