Date range: 1964-1983
Reference number: MS 7
Extent: 13 binders + 1 small archive box + 1 archive box + 1 large binder

Overview

The papers relating to Gallery A extensively document this period and are particularly strong for the 1960s. They comprise business correspondence, exhibition catalogues, invitations, press clippings, lists and financial records all relating to the day to day activities of running the two commercial galleries in Melbourne and Sydney. The exhibition catalogues provide both documentary and visual testimony of the social and cultural milieu of Sydney, Melbourne and Canberra at this point in history. They also document which Australian artists were being exhibited, images of their work and records of prices of these works.

Biographical Note

The Gallery A directors included Clement Meadmore, James Mollison, Janet Dawson and Ann Lewis. It was first established at Flinders Lane, Melbourne, by Max Hutchinson (28 July 1959) and directed by Clement Meadmore as a gallery specialising in Australian new paintings and sculpture. The gallery was inactive during the early part of 1962 but later in the year it reopened in extensive, modern premises at 275 Toorak Road, South Yarra. Among facilities at the new Gallery A was a complete print workshop and a modern art school both supervised by Janet Dawson from 1962-64.
The Sydney Branch of Gallery A at 21 Gipps Street Paddington was opened in 1964, and later in the same year a branch was started in Canberra. The Melbourne and Canberra galleries closed and in 1970 Max Hutchinson extended his sphere of operations with the opening of the Max Hutchinson Gallery, New York. He aimed to encourage an exchange of avant-garde culture between countries and act as an exhibitions venue for selected Australian artists. Hutchinson made his permanent home in New York in 1976 and Gallery A, Sydney was taken over by a separate board of directors. Exhibitions were mainly Australian and occasionally American avant-garde painting and sculpture, with emphasis on hard-edge, abstract expressionism and related forms. The gallery had an important influence on art affairs in Sydney. (see The New McCulloch’s Encyclopedia of Australian Art, The Miegunyah Press, 2006)

Relationship to the National Gallery of Australia Research Library

The Research Library holds other manuscripts in its collection that relate to Gallery A and these include Papers of the Max Hutchinson Galleries that were located in the USA, which also contain material relating to Gallery A, Papers of Janine Burke and Papers of Heide Gallery.

The Research Library also holds within its ephemera collection of Art and Artist files material from many of the galleries and artists mentioned in this collection, including Gallery A, Sydney and Gallery A, Melbourne.

A number of the artists who exhibited with Gallery A were interviewed by James Gleeson in the late 1970s, with the sound recordings forming part of the Research Library’s oral history collection.

Relationship to the National Gallery of Australia Collection

Max Hutchinson, the original owner of Gallery A, acted as an agent in the sale of Jackson Pollock’s painting Blue poles to the National Gallery of Australia. At the peak of his career in the late 1970s, Hutchinson had two galleries in Soho, the Max Hutchinson Gallery and Sculpture Now, one in Houston and another in Melbourne. In New York he often acted as an agent for the National Gallery of Australia, whose first director, James Mollison, had once worked for him.

Exhibitions held by Gallery A included a number of artists who are represented in the art collection including Tony Coleing, Janet Dawson, John Olsen, Paul Partos, Peter Powditch, Norma Redpath, Jeffrey Smart, Brett Whiteley and many other significant Australian artists.

A short biographical description of each of the three Gallery A organisations, including exhibitions and artists represented, is given in the Print and Printmaking website www.printsandprintmaking.gov.au.

Please Note

As a result of rehousing, the original index for this collection has been superseded by this finding aid. The item level description follows material type, description (when required the exhibition title is given in single quotation marks to distinguish from works of art whose titles are italicised to follow the NGA style guide), location, date and page amount.

Material kept in the Art and Artist files for Gallery A Sydney and Gallery A Melbourne, which were removed from this archive collection, have now been refiled.

Original numerical order has been maintained where possible.
